

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Aviation Law Firm Launches Mediation Practice

(The Woodlands, Texas – August 30, 2010) Coats & Evans, PC, an aviation law firm based in The Woodlands, Texas, announced today that Drew Coats, one of the firm's two founding shareholders, has completed mediation training with mediation pioneer Professor Kimberlee Kovach, a distinguished lecturer in Dispute Resolution at South Texas College of Law and former chair of the American Bar Association's Alternative Dispute Resolution Section and the State Bar of Texas ADR Section.

Aviation related disputes involve unique issues and a unique lexicon. With the completion of Mr. Coats' mediator training, Coats & Evans now offers mediation and dispute resolution services to assist in the search for negotiated resolution of aviation disputes, including aircraft accident, injury and products liability lawsuits, aviation business disputes, aviation business acquisition and dissolution negotiation, aviation insurance disputes and aviation related employment disputes.

By combining the latest in mediation techniques and training with the firm's diverse and active aviation background, Coats & Evans is uniquely suited to help resolve aviation disputes. Coats & Evans can host mediation of aviation disputes at its offices (conveniently located at David Wayne Hooks Memorial Airport) and, using the aircraft it operates, will also mediate aviation disputes anywhere in Texas at no additional expense to the parties. Coats & Evans can also mediate aviation disputes throughout the US.

Coats & Evans represents clients in aviation lawsuits, aviation transactions and aviation-related administrative matters. The firm's attorneys are all pilots and have over 14,000 combined flight hours. For more information on the firm's mediation practice, contact Coats & Evans, 281-367-7732, or on the web at www.AviationMediators.com.
